ABOUT JCAT

A Catalog to Our Past
The Essence of Our Future

A catalog you can search to answer:

"What records are available for my town?"
RACHEL
Researcher

- What records survived for my town?
- What records were destroyed?
- Did you hear about...?

JACOB
Genealogy Company (GenCo)

ANNA
Archivist

- What should we acquire?
- What has higher value?
- What has already been done?
DOJR-ENABLED VISION

Moving from Ad Hoc to a Pipeline of Information
1. People won't see notice of the information
2. Uncatalogued information
3. Need a centralized location for the information
4. Inefficient and expensive to reassess unprocessed data repeatedly
5. Avoid duplicated effort

- 80 more hidden-in-plain-sight expected in Mikolayev

IMPACT
- 116k Jewish individuals discovered in 4 week Pilot Project
- 580,000 descendants now have a new record of their ancestor (assuming each with 5 living descendants)
- 30 researchers in a year = 9,000 discovered collections
- 1.8M are actively tracing Jewish ancestry, 3.5M want to know, 8.1M want to know if it is easy to discover

CATALOGS
- 1,893,000 collections in FamilySearch catalog
- 8,500 collections keyword search "Jewish" in FamilySearch catalog
- 85,400 libraries/archives (123 countries) in WorldCat/OCLC
- 60M pages of documentation Central Archives for the History of the Jewish People

AUTOMATION
- 99.9% decrease in time when AI used for indexing 5M records in 10 hours vs. 150 human years
- DoJR pilot project costs $85 per catalog entry with potential to realize order of magnitude savings
PROJECT PRINCIPLES

PIGGYBACK
Add "genealogical relevance" enhancements to existing catalogs.

REPLICATE
Adopt best practices and best in class components to develop JCat.

PARTNER
Pursue cooperative projects to catalog custodial organizations' holdings.

AUTOMATE
Evolve to automate catalog culling and catalog entry creation.
It would certainly be a monumental work, to better document sources of available Jewish genealogical material, and commercial companies like MyHeritage would certainly be very interested in such an inventory.
I think JCat has astounding potential. I can use it for authority file disambiguation.
This project sounds fascinating. Impressive. We can use it to expose our holdings to a broader community, to avoid redundant work on collections, and to discover new collections for acquisition.
DoJR is a very promising initiative!

DR. GABOR KADAR
Historian and Archivist

DoJR is a very promising initiative!
We understand how useful this catalogue will be . . . we uncovered household records in Vilnius and they were not labelled Jewish but had rich Jewish genealogical information. The Litvak records were packed up several times and sent to Russia - who knows whether they all came back? We are driven by the fact that records are decomposing - on fragile paper - and we want to preserve them before they crumble. We hope that JCat will help us find records in other countries and places where we have yet to look and we will all be able to avoid duplication of work. We want to ensure, before it is too late, that the records will be preserved and translated.
A wonderful initiative which will surely benefit the broader Jewish genealogical community.
